

SO, YOU WANT TO BE A P.I.?

When you think about private investigators, do you think about Magnum, P.I., Moonlighting, or Charlie's Angels? These were sitcom television shows that were popular in the 1980's.

These shows were indeed fun to watch, but they are very different than the real life investigations that are conducted on a daily basis at Interstate Reporting Co., Inc.

Acting like a television detective during surveillance can land you in jail; in fact, almost everything that is 'cool' in television is illegal to do in Wisconsin.

The job of an investigator requires patience, tenacity, attention to detail, and the ability to blend in at any type of situation.

On one day, an investigator could be freezing in his / her vehicle watching a subject's house for eight to ten hours with absolutely no activity from the subject. The next day an investigator could be walking around the Summerfest grounds, trailing closely, and using hidden camera devices.

No two days and no two cases are the same.

SO, DO YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES?
